IMPORTANT DECISION TO AUTO REPAIR MEN AND CAR OWNERS

In the case of Peerless Insurance & Brokerage Co. vs. Dwyer Equipment Co., a decision which is of importance to the owners of automobiles, as well as to persons making repairs thereon, has just been handed down by the Second district court of appeals—Judge Frederick W. Houser writing the opinion—in which it is held that, in accordance with the provisions of the statute, twenty days must elapse after repairs are completed on an automobile before the repairman may legally proceed to enforce his lien; consequently that the sale of an automobile instigated by a lien-claimant who proceeded to enforce his lien prior to the expiration of twenty days after the completion of repairs on the automobile, conferred no title on the purchaser at such sale.

TELEPHONE COMPANY PREPARING TO INSTALL DIAL SYSTEM

Manager C. A. Stevens of the Telephone company announces that work has been started in connection with the installation of dial plates on the telephone instruments which will be used with the new machine switching service, November 1, 1926.

Mr. Stevens states that telephone workmen will call at their customer's premises and place a dial upon each instrument, and will instruct everyone not to use the dial until November 1. This advance work will allow sufficient time to completely cover all customers involved with the changes by November 1, and will give the Telephone company the required time to completely test out the dial equipment with the new central office installation as the work progresses.

Mr. Stevens urges that everyone not attempt to use the dial before they are notified to do so, as such action would only tend to interfere with the central office operator.

CHAMBER PROCEEDINGS

In regard to the seawall, it was agreed at the recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce that a committee should wait upon Mr. Moody at once to point out to him ways and means to obtain the appropriation given by the city. We hope to have a definite deport from this committee in the very near future.

The Chamber was also requested to take action in regard to the condition of our dirt streets, Bayside lane, Strandway and the drives between, and also to take some steps toward the better disposal of garbage and rubbish which make our side streets so unsightly. Regarding the former, the secretary was instructed to write the city asking for help. As for the better disposal of rubbish, it was agreed that cards should be sent to all property owners, containing those portions of the codes of the state and city boards of health stating that all garbage must be kept in covered containers. The property owners and residents are earnestly asked to aid in this matter. We want our beach to be clean, sanitary and attractive, and great piles of loose rubbish and trash on the corners certainly lend nothing to its attractiveness. It was suggested that the above mentioned cards be tacked up by owners of rental houses in the houses and on public corners. This is particularly necessary in the congested districts and is the personal responsibility of every property owner and resident of the beach. The city vans for the collection of garbage and rubbish are due here every Monday and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hunt, of Ostend court, are expecting a visit from their son and family, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hunt and two children, of Wolcott, Colo. Mr. Hunt is postmaster and station agent in Wolcott.

All the departments are now organized except the adult department, which is only waiting for a few more to enlist as prospective members. The King's business demands haste, and several fine appointments are waiting for live wire people.

"Tides of Passion" At Granada Theatre

FILMED AT LA JOLLA
AND BIRD ROCK

La Jolla and its environs come into their own as a "location" for feature pictures with the showing of "Tides of Passion," the screen adaptation of Basil King's novel, "In the Garden of Charity," which will be on view at the Granada theatre for two days, starting Sunday, June 6. Filmed at La Jolla, Bird Rock and Torrey Pines, the picture, which features Mae Marsh, is resplendent with the scenic glory which this community affords, and as many of the people here and in the surrounding cities saw the picture being made, its local screening is looked forward to with much interest. The picture was made by Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, who, in releasing "Tides of Passion" to the theatre-going public, said: "We have issued a declaration of independence. We are proving ourselves free of every influence in the world save only the theatre and its wants. Because of the scrupulous care used in the selections of each of several factors—story, author, star, cast, direction and settings—we look upon this picture as essentially and peculiarly an exhibitor production. Wherefore, with full confidence, we present 'Tides of Passion' for your consideration." A news reel, a Harold Lloyd re-issue, "Among Those Present," and a novelty film will also be shown.

On Saturday, June 5, the Granada is showing, both matinee and night, Bebe Daniels and Harrison Ford in "Lovers in Quarantine." It's nothing serious. Just an acute attack of love sickness and laughing complications. It's really the best Daniels comedy in some time.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, June 8-9, the Granada is presenting "The Wanderer," a gorgeous spectacle, which features Greta Nissen, William Collier, Jr., Ernest Torrence, Wallace Beery, Tryon Poyer and Kathlyn Williams. The story of the wandering son, of the black sheep of the family, is the oldest story in fiction. Among the many big scenes in this production, which has been acclaimed the ultimate in the pictorial, are the departure and inglorious return of the Prodigal Son, the last night of Babylon, the bacchanalian orgy and the destruction of the city that follows. A fable and comedy will also be shown, and because of the unusual length of the production, the first show will start promptly at 6:45, and the second show at 9.

You'll be out of step with the times if you fail to see Harry Langdon, the sad faced comedian, in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," which will be the attraction at the Granada for Thursday and Friday, June 10-11. If laughs were worth a dollar, it would cost you a million to see "Tramp, Tramp Tramp." Another of the "Twisted Tale" comedies will be shown. These novel featurettes are in reality a seven-reel feature boiled down to one reel, with the picture ending twisted so that it is almost impossible to guess just how it will all come out.

The Granada theatre management announce that they have purchased "Stella Dallas" and "The Vodga Boatman," two of the biggest pictures of the season, both of which will be on view at that theatre at an early date.

GIRL IS FOUND CHAINED TO BED FOR FIVE YEARS

Sheriff Discovers Her in Cabin With Demented Brother.

Luray, Va.—An eighteen-year-old girl has just been rescued from five years of being chained to a heavy bedpost in a tiny cabin while a demented brother played about her.

The plight of the girl, believed to be demented either congenitally or from confinement, was accidentally discovered by Deputy Sheriff Gillespie.

Gillespie was making a trip over the well-nigh impassable roads to summon witnesses in moonshine cases when night forced him to seek shelter at the Lanford cabin.

Grabbed by Boy.

He rapped at the door and a shrill voice bade him "come in." Gillespie opened the door and was caught in a viselike grasp about the thighs by a boy about ten years old. Gillespie, with difficulty, broke the boy's grasp.

Sitting before the fire place he was startled by a cry which, he thought, came from an animal in the corner of the room.

He walked to the corner and found the eighteen-year-old daughter of the Lanfords chained to a bed of solid timbers.

The links of the chain were so heavy that it was almost impossible for the weakened girl to drag them across the floor, while she could walk or crawl only a few feet in a semicircle.

Chained Five Years.

Gillespie questioned Mrs. Lanford, who told him the girl had been chained for five years, and that the close confinement was necessary for her own safety and that she couldn't be trusted not to harm herself or others, the mother said.

That the state provides for such unfortunates the Lanfords did not know. In their fear and ignorance close confinement was the only recourse when a man or woman was "queer."

On his return here Gillespie reported the case to the county authorities who will have the girl committed to an institution.

Saves Grateful Coyote From Vengeful Rabbits

Bridgeport, Neb.—Here's a story that may seem incredible but is vouched for to the correspondent by one whose veracity has never been questioned:

A. O. Johnson, an employee of the T-T ranch near here, has a coyote that refuses to leave his place and which licks his hands and follows him around like a dog. Until a few days ago this animal was wild and roamed the prairies near the ranch the same as any other coyote. The taming of the coyote came about when Johnson saved its life from attack by a pack of jack rabbits.

Johnson was feeding the cows when he saw the coyote running toward him, followed by about fifty jack rabbits. The frightened animal was almost exhausted and leaped onto the hay sled he was driving. The rabbits continued their pursuit and would not leave until Johnson had killed half a dozen of them with a club. The coyote cowered on the hay sled and refused to leave after his attackers had departed.

Calls Modern Convicts Whining Tea Hounds

Prince Town, England.—Convicts these days are not the old hard-boiled type of times past—men who were really tough and gloried in it and could take or give a blow without any fuss.

The modern "bad man" is more the afternoon tea and powder-puff variety, who suffers from "nerves" and likes to cry about it.

This is indicated in the latest report of the governor of Dartmoor prison, which for generations has housed desperate criminals.

"The present-day convict is far better educated than his confrere of old en days," said the governor, "but he is softer and more apt to whine over trifles. Assaults are almost unknown, but petitions are becoming a evil

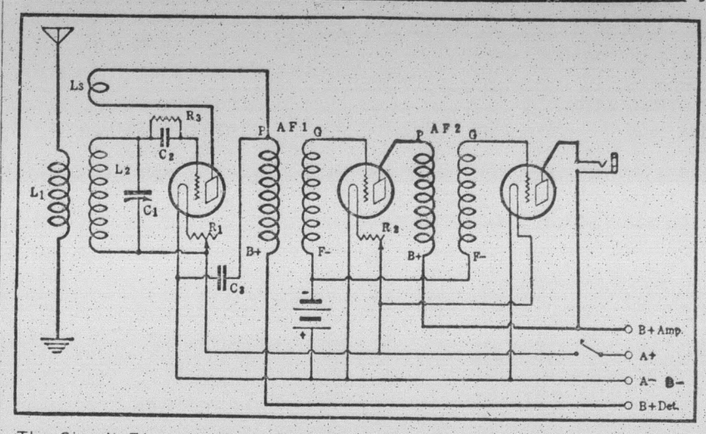
RADIO



The Circuit Diagram of the Three-Tube Set That Was Completed Within One Hour.

By CHESTER CHARLTON
in Radio World.

The one-hour set is not one that simply lasts an hour, but one that it takes only one hour to make. It will last for many years and will render excellent service.

The radio side of the circuit consists of the justly famous three-circuit tuner. The audio channel comprises two stages of transformer coupled amplification. Hence the three tubes. All three sockets are a part of the detector-amplifier unit. Only the radio side need be wired. The only change I made was to cut the one-inch lead that comes from the F posts of the two audio transformers to insert a "C" battery (as shown in diagram).

Coil Information.

Any of the commercial three-circuit tuning coils may be used in this circuit. The one shown tunes with a .0005 mfd. variable condenser. It has a pancake tickler. However, some other sort of tickler will do as well. For instance, if you wind your own coil, you may use a 3½-inch diameter tubing for the stator, 4 inches high, placing 10 turns of No. 24 double silk-covered wire near the top (L1). Terminate. Leave ¼-inch space and wind 45 turns of wire in the same direction for the secondary (L2). The tickler would consist of as many turns of the same kind of wire as you can put on any tubing that will rotate inside the secondary. Remember that a shaft has to pass through the secondary, hence wind the tickler coil so as to leave anchorage room thereon for the shaft where it must be joined to the tickler form.

A straightline capacity tuning condenser was used. This has semi-circular plates. The fact that the condenser has an insulation end-plate does not mean that the condenser is not low-loss. It is. To make the tuning more convenient on the lower waves, and yet avoid crowding on any part of the dial, a converted dial was used.

The Parts Needed.

You need get only a 7 by 18-inch panel, a .005 mfd. variable condenser, a dial vernier, if you use frequency condensers, or a converter, a 7 by 17-inch baseboard, a grid leak, and a knob.

The layout of the parts is very simple. As the condenser is the only real tuning element, it alone has a dial. The tickler coil is turned by means of a knob, even a rheostat knob, or, if desirable, a 2-inch dial may be used here. The rheostats, jack, and even the fixed condensers, including the grid condenser, are part of the detector-amplifier unit.

The wiring precautions include these: Connect the rotor plates of the variable condenser to the grid return side of the coil L2, the 45-turn coil, if you make your own. This is the connection made to "A" plus. Connect the aerial coil so that the ground and "A" plus connections adjoin. This accounts for two terminals, one each of primary and secondary, and the other connections of these windings go to aerial and grid condenser, respectively. The tickler or movable coil may be joined to the plate of the detector tube in either manner, that is, either terminal to plate.

Actual Time, 57 Minutes.

The set shown in the photographs was completed in 57 minutes, but we will call it an hour. This included the drilling of the panel and the mounting of the dial, two items that require a little care and hence took a good fraction of the time. There are only about a dozen connections to make. The leads are brought out to binding posts on the unit, and a marked battery cable should be used for convenience in establishing contacts at the batteries.

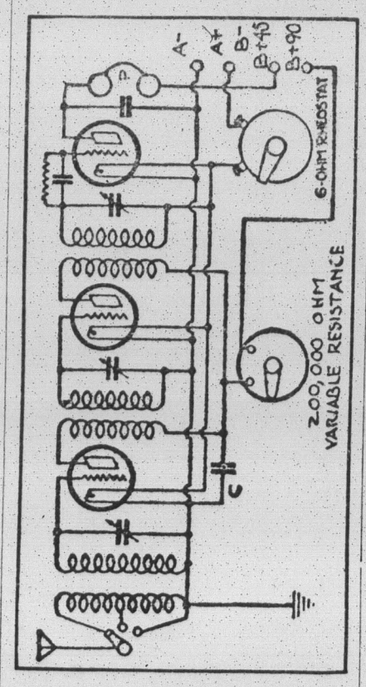
Standard Type of Tuned Radio-Frequency Outfit

The growing tendency to use high voltages in audio frequency amplifiers often results in the application of the same voltages to the radio frequency tubes, due to the fact that separate binding posts for the radio frequency and audio frequency "B" positive taps are not provided for in many sets.

The accompanying illustration shows a convenient and practical method of varying the voltage on the radio-frequency tubes, by the use of a high resistance.

The circuit shown is not new, but is a standard type of tuned radio-frequency outfit, illustrated to show where the high resistance should be connected in series with the supply to the radio frequency tubes only, the 90-volt tap in the illustration connecting to the audio frequency tubes directly.

Any variable resistance of suitable value may be used in this manner to control voltage on R. F. tubes. The illustration shows the Centralab resistance. The Bradleyohm and the Clarostat are others which should serve satisfactorily.—Cleveland News.



Method of Varying Voltage on Radio-Frequency Tubes.

Why Your Radio Tubes Need Filament Light

The fact that a radio bulb does emit light is entirely an incidental feature of its operation. What is desired in a tube is a flow of little particles of electricity called "electrons," and the easiest way to obtain it is to burn certain kinds of wires in glass bulbs from which the air has been exhausted.

The temperature must be quite high in order to make the flow copious, and most wires must be heated white-hot by the current from the A battery for proper operation. Of course, the incandescent wire, or "filament," as it is correctly called, emits considerable light, but this phenomenon has absolutely no connection with the functioning of the tube from the radio standpoint.

It is quite possible to obtain a stream of the minute electrons in a tube by the use of certain substances known as "radioactive" materials, but their expense and rarity make their practical application extremely limited. Radium and radium compounds are foremost in this radioactive group, so the cost of tubes equipped with filaments of this precious element can easily be imagined. No A battery incidentally, would be required for such tubes, as the flow of electrons from radioactive compounds is automatic and continuous.

Certain less expensive chemical compounds of high electron emitting properties have been successfully employed in radio tubes. The wire which ordinarily must be burned at white heat is coated with a layer of one of these compounds, and the tube is then operated at a mere dull cherry-red heat.

In many of the modern tubes, of both the coated and uncoated varieties, little or no light is visible through the glass, because of the inner coating of mercury which lines the bulbs. The heaviness of this coating varies considerably, as will, therefore, the amount of light that penetrates through it, so no significance can be attached to the brilliance of the illumination.

Uncle Sam and His Nephews, the States, Are Collecting Over a Billion Dollars in Yearly Tolls on Motor Vehicles and Fuel

More Than Meets the Nation's Billion Dollar Highway Building Bill—Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, Tells Striking Details.

By JUDSON C. WELLIVER

America has reverted to the ancient system of collecting tolls wherewith to build and maintain highways.

In 1925 these tolls amounted to $1,094,000,000, collected through motor licenses, gasoline taxes, property, corporation, income production and other taxes on automobiles, automobile manufactures, the petroleum industry, etc.

In the same year $1,003,000,000 was spent on rural roads. It took near a century to build $20,000,000,000 worth of railroads. A highway system costing that much will be created in twenty years at present rate.

Nev.	4	318,216

These are some of the high points presented by Thomas H. MacDonald, Chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, in an interview on highway development.

"The equipment of this continent with modern roads has been the most amazing provision of a public utility that any community ever accomplished in a similar period," said Mr. MacDonald. "Historians say the Roman Empire was held together by its highway system, radiating from Rome to the Provinces. But America has converted a continent into a neighborhood within a few years.

"This accomplishment really represents the inauguration of a new system of taxation; a system of licenses and excises levied against particular privileges or classes of property, the proceeds being dedicated to highway development.

"For 1925 state taxes on gasoline aggregated $143,000,000. Add to that $263,500,000 for automobile registration and licenses; $150,000,000 as property taxes on the 20,000,000 automobiles; $143,430,709 as the Federal excise tax on automobiles, parts and accessories for 1925; $50,000,000 to represent wheelage taxes, special taxes on gasoline or cars, and fines collected from motor drivers. The total reaches approximately $749,930,709.

Nearly $1,100,000,000 Yearly Tolls

"But these figures do not include income and corporation taxes derived from the motor car business. Nor do they include state, local, production, corporation or income taxes of the petroleum industry. Yet that industry has a capitalization of about $9,000,000,000. A modest estimate for these, added to the preceding figures, makes a total of $1,094,930,709, which is considerably more than the entire amount spent on country roads.

"You observe that I have not included the government's expenditures of nearly $100,000,000 in Federal aid to road building. In the eight years from 1918 to 1925 inclusive, the Government has contributed $460,000,000 to help the states build roads. That is considerably less than half of what the country spent on roads in either 1924 or 1925. Moreover, in the same eight years, while the Government was distributing that $460,000,000 to the states, it collected $873,000,000 in internal revenue taxes on motor cars, parts and accessories. Other hundreds of millions were collected in income and corporation taxes from motor car manufacturers and dealers. Thus it appears that Federal contribution to roads as compared to the contribution of people who make and use the cars and the gasoline has been decidedly modest.

"But, while Federal contribution is only about 10 per cent of highway expense, it has accomplished results altogether out of proportion to its amount. First, it was an incentive to the States. The Government required them to invest as much as it contributed. Then the Government takes part in a general supervision of construction and a share in determining routes. So we have built roads on better standards, and have got them organized into a truly national system instead of forty-eight state systems.

Unifying the Road System

"Some day it will be realized that this was the most valuable contribution. Driving from Boston to New York, a man may pass through four states. Every one might have a splendid highway system; but if these did not articulate at the state lines the trip would be almost impossible. Thanks to the systematization under Federal influence, country roads are as superior to state boundary lines as are railroads.

"The Federal highway act of 1921 required that a complete nation-reaching system of roads be designated within two years, as the roads to which Uncle Sam would give assistance. It was found that there were 2,866,061 miles of highway in the country. Of these 7 per cent, or 200,624 miles, were to be included in the national system, eligible for Federal aid. Nearly every mile of that 2,866,061 was a candidate for designation as a Federal highway. But in the end the system was laid out as a truly national one.

"When the map was published it showed nearly the 200,000 miles of designated routes. Since then 46,485 miles of these roads have been improved, nearly 13,000 more are under construction, and over 2,000 have been approved for early beginning of work. In addition to that many states have built, without Federal aid, extensive sections which are included within this national system. In fact, these state contributions aggregate 55,000 miles, so that approximately two-thirds of the 200,000 mile national highway system has already been improved.

Uncle Sam as Road Supervisor

"Along with all of this, there is the Federal supervision over construction and maintenance. When Uncle Sam helps build a road he reserves authority to require its proper maintenance. Then there is the business of uniform marking along highways, which makes it possible for motorists to drive thousands of miles on a designated route whose markings become so familiar that after a few miles he need not ask directions.

"Finally Federal participation has made possible a great number of bridges at strategic points. Some of these have been needed for years, yet state and local authorities have been unable to provide them, partly because of the cost, partly because of competition between routes. When a stream separates two counties, or two states, it is often impossible to get them to agree where to build or how to divide the cost of a bridge. In such cases the Federal authority has repeatedly mediated differences and secured construction. Let me mention some instances.

"Missouri has been a state for over a century. Divided east and west by the Missouri river, communication between the two sections has been limited, to the state's disadvantage. Four bridges across the river were required in the national highway program, and Federal co-operation with the state of Missouri has made them possible. Two are completed, the others are under construction. The four will cost a little more than $2,000,000, the Federal contribution being nearly $1,000,000.

Getting Bridges Constructed

"Another bridge that has a peculiar importance, both locally and nationally, has been needed for generations across Raritan bay, New Jersey. It is one of the links in the chain of communication between New York city and the country at large. In 1924 New Jersey had some $700,000 of Federal aid allotted to her roads and in 1925 over $1,000,000. So the state agreed that this Raritan bridge should be built, costing about $4,000,000. Federal funds made up about one-third of the amount. The bridge, over a mile and a half long, is now nearly completed.

"Such illustrations might be multiplied indefinitely. National participation has repeatedly made possible the accomplishment of vitally important highway development."

According to the American Petroleum Institute, the gasoline tax was first imposed in 1919 in Oregon. It has now been adopted by all the states except New York, Illinois, New Jersey and Massachusetts. The tendency has been continually to increase the rate of tax per gallon. As late as 1921 gasoline taxes for the entire country were only about $5,000,000; in 1922, $12,000,000; in 1923, almost $37,000,000; in 1924, $79,000,000, and in 1925, $142,987,749.

With good prospects that the "gas" tax will be adopted soon by states which do not have it now and with the gallonage rates being increased in other states, it is calculated that this tax alone will soon raise $200,000,000 a year, quite possibly during 1926.

IT PAYS TO BE CAREFUL

Most motor cars are stolen as a result of the owner's carelessness. Most auto accidents are caused as the result of a driver's carelessness or inexperience. Insurance companies can pay for lost cars and broken bones, but unless the public co-operates in protecting both life and property, the insurance companies are powerless to reduce losses or insurance rates. It pays to be careful.

REASON AMERICA PROSPERS

Factory workers in New York City received an average of $12.81 a week in December, 1914; in December, 1925, they received $30.73. For January, 1926, even this last figure was boosted to $30.85 per worker. Wages have increased about 138 per cent; living costs have increased about 70 per cent.

These figures, approximately, prevail all over the United States. It is from this surplus earning power that the country draws the pay for its autos, its radios, its new homes, its corporation stocks with 15,000,000 owners. While some industries and some sections of the country have not been uniformly prosperous, these figures show a general average. But everywhere there has been a lift in conditions.

ROAD SIGNS NEEDED

Coming down the highway from the north, it has been noted that the name of Mission Beach is conspicuous by its absence on the signs of the Automobile Club of Southern California. The attention of Hal Hobson, local manager of the club, has been called to this oversight, as well as to the fact that the majority of motorists would prefer going to San Diego by the scenic route, taking in Mission Beach, Ocean Beach, Point Loga, La Playa, etc., provided they were assured by reliable information that the distance by that route is no farther than by the inland road. It was also pointed out that the recent paving of Bacon street shortens the distance by the beach route.

MAY SOCIAL OF THE PENINSULA MASONIC CLUB A SPLENDID SUCCESS

An exceptionally large and representative gathering of Masons and their friends attended the May social of the Peninsula Masonic Club held in the Masonic Hall on Newport avenue, Thursday evening, May 27. An excellent entertainment was provided and a fine "pot luck" lunch service proved all that could be desired in the way of variety and deliciousness, while dancing added to the general jollity of the occasion.

Dance music was furnished by the Bungalow Trio; violin solo by Mrs. Stanford Vose, accompanied by Mrs. Ethel Sterling; vocal selection and piano solo by Mrs. Kirk Smith (Katherine), accompanied by Mrs. Vose and Mrs. Sterling. The entertainment was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Spencer and a number of assistants. Following is the detailed program, which was replete with most enjoyable local hits:

USE YOUR PORCH WHILE YOU MAY

The time for enjoying our porches is all too short to permit even the slightest opportunity for their use to pass. Most porches seem only to be used in leisure hours—and with the majority of us these are too scarce really to warrant the existence of a porch. Then why should we not use it as often as we can?

In this respect our European cousins, particularly the French and the Italians, use better judgment in regard to the open air spaces around their houses. For one thing, during warm weather they take nearly all their meals in the tiny gardens, courtyards or on porches, while we, for the most part, dare not attempt such a thing just because it isn't done generally. The fact is, however, that a little encouragement in this case is all most of us need or want. So that if you want to become the leader in your neighborhood, just start making really worth while use of your porch, and you'll soon see how your neighbors will follow suit.

AN ABBREVIATED STORY

BEAUTY AND EXPLORER

TRUESDALE ROVER, the famous explorer, traveler and hunter, never failed to dazzle and awe the young women who had the honor to be introduced to him at the social gatherings at which he was in such great demand. So now, sitting behind a potted palm with beautiful young Magazine Ootie at Mrs. Piggyback's reception, he prepared for an easy conquest as he launched into a description of the China sea snootfish, which climbs aboard ships and bites sailors in half.

"Yes," she nodded brightly. "I've seen them. Aren't they exciting? But the sea oxen off the coast of Labrador are much more dangerous, because they hunt in flocks and butt holes into boats with their heads. Have you seen them?"

"Eer—no," admitted Rover. "Now, the flying weasel of southern Zanzibar is a curious animal. It flies revolving with its tail in its mouth, for great distances, and yet never has been known to grow dizzy."

"Oh, yes, I've seen them often," replied Magazine brightly. "But I prefer to watch the Hellespont camels of central Hindustan. They walk backwards, you know, on their front legs, yet never bump into a thing, somehow. You've seen them, of course?"

"Well—er—no," said Rover, reluctantly. "I must tell you of the Bulgarian goulash bug, which sings like a mouth organ and drinks through a straw. When I first—"

"Oh, yes!" she interrupted. "I've watched them often. Have you ever seen the Patagonian plumdog, which—"

"Stop!" cried Truesdale Rover hoarsely. "How on earth did you, at your age, get to see all of these things in all these places?"

"At the 'movies,' of course," replied Magazine, simply. "Shall we dance this one?"

But Rover had staggered off to 'phone in his resignation to the Geographical society.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

CO-OPERATION

IT IS remarked by observing students of cause and effect that, in all activities of minds and hands, we as a people are decidedly delinquent in co-operation.

In other words, instead of working together as a whole, we are at odds, leaving off the mastery of today's perplexities until tomorrow and likely as not forgetting them, or putting them off altogether in pursuit of outside activities of an alien nature.

In the office and in the home, if you will look about you with impartial eyes, you will not be long in discovering that there is frequent lack of co-operative forces, due not so much to the individual workers, but to the inefficiency of those whose duty it is to direct, encourage and spur up workers to do their best and keep in touch and tune with others.

In great office buildings, or in factories where large numbers of both sexes are employed, there are efforts made to bring about the full co-operation of forces—a work filled with difficulties, calling every hour for rare patience and diplomacy.

If examined critically these efforts will be found meager as compared with what might be done if co-operation of forces should be organized and directed by competent captains.

While results in the last decade have improved, they are far from being wholly satisfactory.

There still is much waste of energy and loss of time without any apparent curtailment of expense to the anxious, hard-working manufacturers, merchants and employers generally who provide the money for pay days, irrespective of the state of business.

The care-worn housewives have similar experiences, and meet like conditions simply because of a laxity in organization and the co-operation of forces.

For all deficiencies, whether mental or physical, we must in some way or another pay the penalties imposed by cause and effect upon all mankind.

The thing to do to avoid these oft-repeated impositions is to bring about a more effective means in the co-operation of forces, not only in the home and the factory, but in every department of the state and the nation.

Not until this shall be done can we escape burdensome taxes or hope for reduced prices in anything that goes upon our backs, into our homes and upon our tables.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"ALL FOR A SONG"

"HE HAS sold his future for a song," they said of a rich man's son who, instead of taking advantage of the unusual opportunities open to him for a worth-while career, was whiling away his golden years on the Great White Way.

"All for a song" has come to mean to us "paying too much for a whistle," any undue sacrifice or waste for something that is worthless or only of transient moment, particularly the superficial. It has come down to us from the day when its significance was literal.

Queen Elizabeth, as a token of her appreciation of the poet, Edmund Spencer, had ordered Lord Burleigh to present him with £100, which in those days was a small fortune. Upon this Lord Burleigh is said to have exclaimed: "All this for a song!"

WHO WOULD HAVE GOLD?

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHO would have gold? It isn't hard to gain:
Go plant the seed, the Lord will send the rain
And fill the fertile fields with yellow grain.

Who gold desires? Then sow the rolling hill,
Or plant a little garden, if you will,
Or put a box upon a window-sill.

And plant a bulb, or give a root a hold,
And then some day observe a flow'r unfold.
It isn't hard to gain—who would have gold?

The summer sun will ripen all your wheat,
A yellow rose will make your garden sweet,
A yellow jonquil cheer your window-seat.

Upon your path the summer's petals fall,
And autumn's yellow leaves adorn the wall.
Who would have gold? It isn't hard at all!

CHEESE AS FOOD

CHEESE is one of our most valuable protein foods; is concentrated and has very little waste. When the price is high compare it with meat, one of the other proteins which we all like, and notice the difference in waste.

Cheese Omelet.

Beat two egg yolks until thick, add two tablespoonfuls of water, salt and pepper to taste. Beat the whites until stiff and add one cupful of grated cheese. Put a tablespoonful of butter in a hot, smooth frying pan; when hot pour in the lightly mixed omelet. Cook until well set, place in the oven to finish cooking on the top. Serve at once on a hot platter.

Welsh Rarebit.

Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well blended add one cupful of hot milk; cook until smooth and creamy. Add one cupful of grated cheese and when the cheese is melted serve on buttered toast or hot crackers. To make the dish a little more tasty add half a dozen chopped olives.

Cheese Fondu.

Pour one cupful of scalded milk over one cupful of soft bread crumbs, add three-fourths of a cupful of soft cheese cut into bits, one tablespoonful of butter, and salt and pepper to taste. Beat five egg yolks until thick, add to the cheese mixture and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in a well-greased dish for twenty minutes or until puffy and cooked to the center.

Cheese and Celery Salad.

Select firm, crisp, tender celery and choose the stalks which have deep grooves. Cut into inch pieces and fill with seasoned cream cheese to which chopped onion, green pepper and nuts have been added. Heap a half dozen of these filled stalks on lettuce and serve with a French dressing.

This same method may be used for longer stalks and serve them as a salad accompaniment.

Hot Ham and Tomato Sandwiches.

Saute thin slices of lean ham very quickly in a frying pan. Peel and slice thin some ripe tomatoes. Have ready slices of white bread cut one fourth inch thick and lightly toasted. Spread toast with salad dressing, cover with ham, then a slice of tomato and spread with salad dressing and chopped lettuce leaves. Cover with toast spread on one side with salad dressing. Cut into triangles and garnish with sliced pickle. Serve with coffee.

Baked Mackerel.

If salt soak over night, skin side up, changing the water several times. Put to bake skin-side down, adding a few teaspoonfuls of water. Cook 20 minutes, or until the fish loosens from the bones. After ten minutes cover with sweet cream and baste often during the baking. Serve with sauce poured over the fish.

MOTHER GOES SHOPPING

By CAROLINE ABE

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

"FIFTY dollars," said little Janey Wyatt, reverently touching the crisp check in her mother's hand with awed fingers. "How splendid, mother!"

"Your Aunt Olive has been most generous," remarked Mr. Wyatt from across the table.

"What are you going to do with it, mother?" came as sixteen-year-old Mildred's contribution to the occasion.

"I shan't make up my mind in a hurry," said Mrs. Wyatt. "It's more fun planning than actually spending. I shall think it over and decide what I'd like best as a birthday gift."

"Be sure you really spend it on yourself," cautioned her husband. "You know how you are always using what should be your money for the girls, or the house, and then never replacing it."

"Don't worry about that. I'm going to be as selfish as possible with this," she assured him. But later, when she was going over her household accounts, after finishing her letter to Ruth Ann, away at college, she frowned a little over the appalling totals that the bills always seemed to reach. There were always so many places to put the money, "but Aunt Olive meant me to spend this check for myself, and I'm going to," she resolved again.

She was debating the relative advantages of a new suit over some really good china as she prepared dinner one evening, when Mildred burst in excitedly from her music lesson with the news that she had been one of the three students chosen to play on a recital program which was to be attended by a well known teacher from the city.

"Your lemon-colored organdie will be nice to wear," said her mother, when the first rejoicings over the triumph were over.

"Oh, mother, no! The girls aren't going to wear light things, that's so babyish. They're all going to have new dark silks—something simple and dignified, but rich looking, you know!"

Mrs. Wyatt sighed, but hesitated a moment, then said decidedly—"Very well, then Mildred, we'll look at silks tomorrow."

The material for Mildred's dress and the inevitable accessories left one of the five crisp yellow bills huddled forlornly in one corner of her purse. And a solicitor for the fund for Near East relief commandeered that a day or two later.

"But I won't tell a soul, and I can save it out of the house-keep money somehow," she assured herself. She had just succeeded, after much strenuous planning and curtailing, in replacing the last of the sum, when her husband mentioned, with careful casualness, that he was not going to the State Bar association this year. "Not much to miss, really," he said. "And this has been a bad month, and I don't think I can afford the trip."

She knew how much the yearly meeting meant to him, as an opportunity to meet old colleagues and get a little relaxation from the routine of small-town law practice, and protested at once. "If it's just the ready money," she stammered, "I have some I've been saving out of the housekeeping money that I don't need especially just now. Would—fifty dollars would be enough, wouldn't it?"

"Yes, but I hate to take—Say, by the way, you never did show me what you bought with your birthday money, and the kids have quit talking about 'mother's legacy.' You didn't get that money mixed with the housekeeping funds and spent it that way, did you?"

"Oh, no—it's quite separate!" she assured him, holding out the five crumpled bills. "Don't worry about that. I'm still making up my mind what I want most."

On the same evening that her husband handed her back five ten-dollar bills, some weeks after his return from the convention, a special delivery letter arrived from Ruth Ann. She was invited to a house party, it began, and plunged on through an incoherent maze of adjectives about the wonderfulness of the people and the gorgeousness of the opportunity. "And, mother, my things will be all right, except the evening dress. And I really must have a new one. Do you think—" Mrs. Wyatt thought to such good purpose that a fluffy blue chiffon that would be a charming background for Ruth Ann's delicate blondness, and a dainty white evening cloak in the bargain, went forward the next day. And only a stray handful of change jingled forlornly in her purse!

A few days later Mr. Wyatt remarked: "I picked up a piece of business at the convention that I wouldn't have had otherwise. The fee for it came today, and by rights it belongs to you, since I wouldn't have been on hand to get it if you hadn't insisted on my going." And he handed her fifty dollars.

"I'll go to town in the morning, early, and buy the first thing I see that costs fifty dollars!" she said to herself as she slipped the bill into her flat purse. "I don't dare take any more chance with this slippery birthday gift of mine, or Edward and the children will begin to suspect."

In the morning she hurried through her work and started on the purchasing expedition. On the front steps she met the frail little woman who did the Wyatt's laundry, struggling along with the heavy basket, and helped her bring it back to the kitchen.

"Where's Jimmy, that you're bringing the clothes yourself?" she asked.

"Jimmy's had a fall, ma'am, and broke his leg. He'll be laid up all winter, the doctor says. And the baby's sick, too. I don't know how we'll get along now, without Jimmy's pay, for medicine costs so much—"

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" Feeling suddenly guilty that she had not taken more interest in the troubles of this shabby woman, whose husband had deserted her, Mrs. Wyatt opened her purse. "Here, you must let me help you a little, Mrs. Murphy, now while things are so hard. Just as a loan—you really must take it!"

"But, Mrs. Wyatt, fifty dollars—"

"No hurry about returning it. Use it to help with the doctor's bill and to get what poor Jimmy needs to make him comfortable."

Just as Mrs. Murphy limped out of the kitchen door, spilling her voluble thanks, Mildred appeared, staring in surprise as Mrs. Wyatt slipped out of her coat and laid off her hat.

"Why, mother, aren't you going to town?"

"I don't think it's necessary after all, this morning," she answered, trying to keep a rueful note out of her voice. "Now hadn't you better finish your practicing?" she added, as her daughter's inquiring glance began making her a bit uncomfortable.

If Mildred had her suspicions she did not mention them to her mother, and Mrs. Wyatt put Aunt Olive's fifty dollars out of her mind and plunged into preparations for Ruth Ann's homecoming. But the month's income seemed, for some reason, more stubbornly inelastic than usual. To begin with, Mr. Wyatt had given her twenty dollars less than usual, for housekeeping expenses, mumbling something about additional expenses at the office; in almost every letter Ruth Ann mentioned some new need for money that her allowance would not cover. Then Mildred and even little Janey seemed to have more mercenary attitudes than they had ever shown before about their household duties, demanding pay for this and that, and talking continually of mysterious class dues and special assessments at school.

"I believe the dollars are bewitched!" she groaned one evening after another unsuccessful struggle to make her balance cover the gifts which she had hoped to get for the family. She slammed down the offending paper with its useless calculations, and answered a timid knock at the door.

One of the smaller of the numerous Murphy tribe stood on the threshold. "Pa's back," he announced. "He got religion at a meetin' in the city, an' he's gotta good job an' says he's gonna stay. An' ma sent this." He thrust a soiled little wad of bills into her hand—bills that meant the books her husband wanted, the dressing case for Ruth Ann, Mildred's slippers, Janey's doll carriage. On the instant Aunt Olive's birthday gift was spent again.

The Wyatt family's gifts had all been duly exhibited and admired, at the breakfast table, before Mrs. Wyatt, after many broad hints from Janey, discovered an envelope under the edge of her plate.

"Why, what's this? You've each given me something already—" she began, as she slit the end. A fifty-dollar bill dropped out, pinned to a card on which was scrawled—"Birthday greetings from Aunt Olive, via your family!"

"You didn't think we were slow enough to stay fooled about what you were doing with your birthday money, did you, mother?" Mildred demanded. "Even my dull comprehension woke, after that Mrs. Murphy episode I listened in on. And when I thought about my recital dress—"

"I felt like the worst pig when Mil wrote me about it." Ruth Ann chimed in. "I had to keep fussing for more money, to save out enough—"

"Oh, my dears." Suddenly feeling guilty that she could have thought Edward and the children the least bit thoughtless and, well—selfish—she held out her arms to the four of them. "But you don't know how much pleasure I had, and how much work that famous fifty dollars was made to do!"

"Five dollars of it I gave," put in Janey placidly. "What you going to do with it, mother?"

Her husband leaned across the table and captured the note, envelope and all. "We aren't going to trust her with it, are we, girls?" he said. "Not even on a holiday, with all the shops closed. I'll take charge of it until tomorrow morning, and then we'll escort her downtown in a body and stand over her until she spends it on something for herself!"

Moravians

The Moravian Brethren are a Protestant sect which arose in Moravia and Bohemia after the death of John Huss, a Bohemian reformer. The first church was established in 1722 by Count Nicholas Zinzendorf at Herrnhut. Moravian refugees came to America in 1735 and settled at Savannah, Ga., but in 1740 removed to Pennsylvania and founded a settlement in Northampton county, on the Lehigh river.

The entire body of Moravians is organized into three provinces—German, English and American, the church being governed from Herrnhut in Saxony by a general synod which meets every ten years. In the United States the total number of communicants is about 25,000, and there are about 140 churches. Their religion does not differ from that of other Protestant sects in main points of Christian doctrine.—Kansas City Times.

LIVES ON FARM IN OKLAHOMA

Happy Woman Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of sleek cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of cooking for a houseful of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and timid.

This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 9, Box 396, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you doing to yourself?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound."

Other women who have to work hard and keep things going may find the road to better health as Mrs. Short did, through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

WHAT CAUSES BOILS.

Boils and carbuncles are the result of improper diet or infection of the skin. It's sometimes hard to determine the exact cause but CARBOIL will give quick relief. NEGLIGEES IN GREAT VARIETY; BEAUTIFUL HATS FOR MATRONS

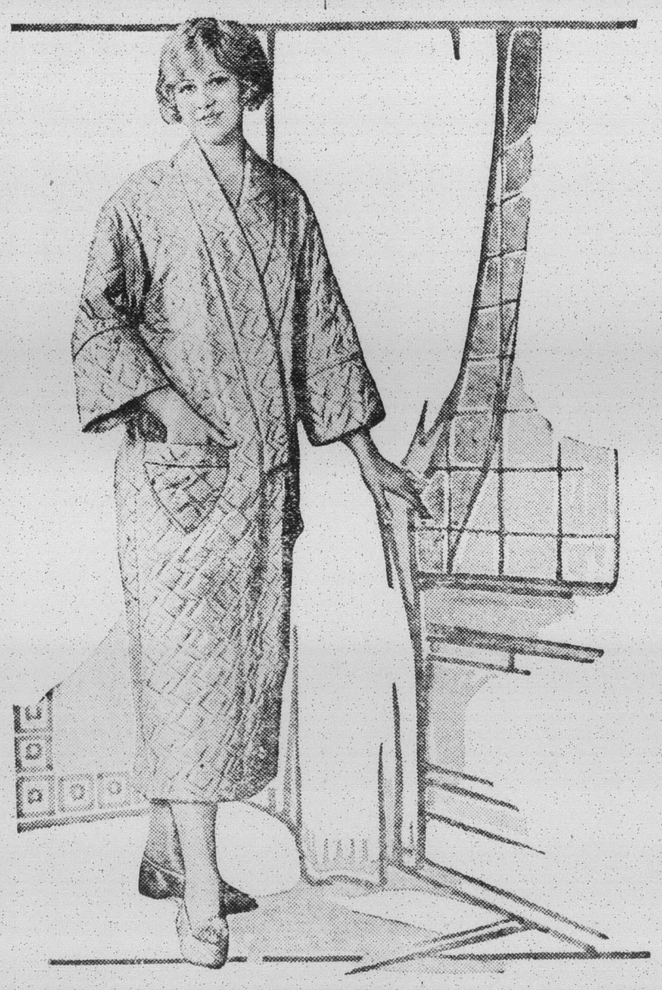
IN THE new displays for summer there are negligees and negligees without end, so varied in character and in style that the average woman is not content with fewer than three of these most graceful and becoming garments. They are very alluring, made mostly of sheer materials, light and supple silks and satins, with much fine, wide lace used in their composition. The long flowing lines that fashion has taken to her heart this spring are at their longest and flowingest in the picturesque types of the negligee, and whatever the type or the material, a negligee is sure to possess the allurement of beautiful color. Even the least expensive of soft, cotton crepes or challis are shown in plain or figured patterns, in all the colors of the rainbow.



A Charming Negligee.

The plainest and most practical of models are cut on the lines of the negligee shown in the picture and every woman needs a garment of this sort and can find it in cotton or in silk materials. Lines remain about the same in all negligees, but sleeve and neck treatments are so greatly varied and collars managed in so many different ways that one loses sight of the similarity in cut.

Among the most striking of new arrivals are those made of black satin, figured in bold, futuristic patterns in vivid colors, or in conventional flowers—tulips for instance—in strong colors. Figured chiffons are posed over thin silks and bordered with plain satin in these vivid negligees. Softer colors appear in flowered chiffon showing big flowers against a plain ground in light colors, as yellow, rose, blue or green. Plain chiffon is used to border these figured patterns and is chosen to match the color in the background. Just as colorful, but less airy, are negligees of taffeta or of satin, and many light flowered silks are represented in the collections.

Much too numerous for the past few years, are those pathetic figures—the elderly women who emulate flappers in ther dress and conduct. They fail to perceive and emphasize the charms that belong to maturity—and publish this failure to everybody, when they wear clothes and affect ways that only belong to youth. Meantime, stylists turn out the most fascinating of clothes for the older woman—clothes that bespeak her poise and the richness of her experience—and fashion frowns darkly upon the stupidity that passes them up and picks out things that were meant to express youth.

Here is a group of tailored hats and turbans suited to matronly wearers. It includes spirited and becoming shapes and reveals intricate designing and faultless workmanship in hats that, at first glance, would impress one as simple. That is one of their charms. But the simplicity is only seeming—it is like the manners of ladies in the great world, which seem so unstudied and spontaneous, but are the result of generations of training and good breeding—and are altogether charming. These examples of headwear suited to older women are specimens of fine artistry in the milliner's art. They are intended for informal wear, with tailored or other dresses of similar character. Combinations of crepe or satin with straw, all-satin, or intricately made ribbon hats, contribute great numbers of hats of this kind to the modes.

For dressier wear there are many dignified, high-crowned models in soft straw or in hair braids trimmed with masses of flowers in rich colors, or intricate ornaments made of ribbon or other millinery materials. In nearly all cases these are applied flat against the shape. Lines are so important that trimmings must not interfere with the silhouette of the hat

SHORT SEASON FOR FRESH ASPARAGUS

Enjoy Delicious Vegetable While Supply Lasts.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The season for fresh asparagus is relatively short, so it is a good plan to enjoy this delicious vegetable many times and in many ways while the supply lasts. Asparagus should always be cooked as soon as possible after it is cut. It toughens and loses flavor very rapidly if allowed to stand.

To prepare it for cooking trim off any tough ends, brush carefully, and scrape off the larger scales. Wash so as to remove all sand and particles of earth which may have lodged under the scales. Fresh, tender, home-grown asparagus does not need the vigorous scraping so often given to the mature stalks with tougher skins.

Asparagus may be cooked whole, or cut up in inch lengths and boiled in slightly salted water. The cooking time of fresh tender young stalks cut up in this way may be only five to ten minutes; at most, twenty or twenty-five minutes' cooking should be enough, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Photograph by U. S. D. A.
Cutting Up Asparagus to Cook It Quickly.

Season the cooked asparagus with salt, pepper, butter, and a little cream, if you have it. Let it stand in a warm place for a few minutes and then serve, either alone or on toast. Many people who have been accustomed to serving the whole stalks accompany them with mayonnaise or vinaigrette—similar to French dressing—or with hollandaise or white sauce. These sauces may be used equally well with the cut-up asparagus. Pass the sauce separately.

The water in which asparagus has been cooked can be used in many ways and should be saved. It makes a delicious soup when seasoned, with a little cream or milk added. This may be thickened or not, as preferred. Asparagus stock is an improvement to soups made from other vegetable juices, such as tomato, onion, or celery. It combines well with cream of chicken soup, and can be made into a good sauce to use with left-over asparagus in making other dishes.

Cooked asparagus may be used in making scalloped dishes, croquettes, fritters, vegetable loaf, timbales, or added to almost any soup, stew, or vegetable salad. Vegetable combinations are increasingly popular, and such dishes as cut-up cooked asparagus with new diced creamed potatoes or with peas, give variety to the menu, and make profitable use of small amounts of each vegetable. An asparagus omelet is an appetizing luncheon dish, as is French toast with asparagus sauce, made with the stock.

By the use of a pressure cooker, the surplus of home-grown asparagus may be canned. Some of the delicate, fresh flavor will of course be lost, but nevertheless asparagus is one of the best of the canned vegetables.

High Value of Cabbage as Source of Vitamines

Cabbage salad has many possibilities. Either white, green or curly cabbage may be used. Chop it fine, and combine with a dressing made as follows: Beat one-half pint of thick whipping cream until stiff; add 4½ tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, 2 tablespoonfuls of fresh grated horseradish, a grating of onion, a few drops of tabasco, and salt to taste. These seasonings may be changed according to individual preference, but be sure there is enough dressing in proportion to the cabbage. Just a dash of cayenne pepper may be used if you do not have tabasco. If the horseradish is in vinegar use only 2 tablespoonfuls of lemon. Half a pint of cream will make dressing enough for about 3 cupfuls of finely chopped cabbage, which will serve six people.

This salad may be used alone on a cabbage leaf, or it may be served on lettuce, or on either may be placed a slice of pineapple and on that a good thick covering of the cabbage salad. A still more elaborate salad may be prepared by adding grated cheese to the pineapple-cabbage combination. A very attractive way to serve this cabbage, if it is made from curly cabbage, is to hollow out the head and use it as a bowl from which the salad is served.

The value of cabbage as a source of vitamines, especially when uncooked, cannot be pointed out too many times, according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

Recipe for a Delicious Pork and Parsnip Stew

Different in its combination of flavors from those of the regulation beef or lamb stew, and very delicious, is this dish which gives the housekeeper a chance to make use of home-grown meat and home-stored vegetables if she lives in the country. If her supplies are bought at city markets she will have no trouble in getting the necessary ingredients.

½ pound fresh lean pork
1 ounce salt pork
½ cupful sliced shallot or onion
3 pints hot water
Pepper
1 cupful cut potatoes
2 tablespoonfuls flour
1½ teaspoonfuls salt
1 cupful cut parsnip

Cut the fresh pork in cubes and place in the water. Boil it till tender. Cut the salt pork in thin slices and add it to the partially cooked meat. Allow about twenty minutes for the potatoes, parsnips and onion to cook, adding them when the meat is almost done. Mix the flour with a little cold water and use it to thicken the stew. Season and serve.

MAKE RHUBARB JELLY TO EAT WITH MEATS

Photograph by U. S. D. A.
Young Tender Plants Make Good Tart Jelly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When very young tender rhubarb of mild flavor is in season, some of it can be used to make good tart jelly. It will be necessary to add pectin, either homemade or commercial, to the rhubarb juice, to make a firm product.

If you do not have the pectin on hand, send to the United States Department of Agriculture for Department Circular 254, "Homemade Apple and Citrus Pectin Extracts and Their Use in Jelly Making," which tells how to make it. Two kinds of pectin, apple and lemon, can be used successfully with rhubarb. The lemon pectin with the rhubarb gives an unusually attractive color.

Pink Skin Stalks Best.

Select rhubarb stalks with as much red or pink skin as possible. Wash and trim stalks of rhubarb, being careful not to remove the bright-colored skin. The addition of extra pink skin improves the color of the juice. Cut the rhubarb into half-inch pieces and [illegible] granite pan [illegible] ful of water for each pound of rhubarb.

Cook until tender, then strain through four thicknesses of cheesecloth. There should be about one and one-quarter cupfuls of juice for each pound of rhubarb.

Add six tablespoonfuls of lemon pectin extract and one and one-quarter cupfuls of sugar for each cupful of rhubarb juice, and boil. The ordinary jelly test cannot always be depended upon in the case of rhubarb, particularly if the stalks are not very young and tender, because there are certain gummy substances present which cause the hot juice to sheet from the edge of the spoon, but which do not assist in making a jelly. It is therefore wise to cook rhubarb jelly somewhat beyond the usual jelly test.

Flavor of Old Is Strong.

The flavor of old rhubarb is apt to be strong. When it is to be used, the addition of one or two pieces of lemon or orange [illegible] to the stems as they cook [illegible] ingredients in [illegible] im-

If you want to buy a car on time

IT is to your advantage to buy the car that you can comfortably afford, on a payment plan that gives you a sure margin of safety.

General Motors has its own finance company, the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, operating the GMAC Plan. Through its service more than 1,000,000 families have purchased cars comfortably out of income.

On August 1 last, the price of this service, which had always been low, was further reduced. And the automobile-buying public is now saving millions of dollars annually as a result of this reduction and the influence of General Motors' leadership.

The purchase of automobiles on time is a universally accepted practice. The car is a utility and it is sound business to conserve capital and use credit. But buy on sound terms and at low rates. Any General Motors dealer will explain the advantages of the GMAC Plan.

One Death Per 1000 Autos in a Year Is Record of U. S.

1 Person is Killed and 28 injured annually for every 1000 Automobiles in this Country

STEWART-WARNER AUTOMOBILE SAFETY COUNCIL

ONE out of a thousand is the relationship between the annual automobile fatalities and the number of motor vehicles in this country, according to the Stewart-Warner Safety Council for the prevention of automobile accidents, which has undertaken a strenuous campaign of automobile safety and accident prevention.

And for every fatality there are at least 28 accidents serious enough to get on record. This does not take into consideration minor sprains and bruises or people suffering from nervous shock as the result of being in an automobile accident.

To appreciate what a vast army of killed and injured is annually conscripted by the reckless motorist and careless pedestrian, a comparison may be made with American casualties in the great war. Over a third as many people are killed annually by the automobile as there were American soldiers killed on the field of battle during the entire war, while the number injured each year is nearly three times as great as the number of our boys who were wounded throughout the war.

RAINFALL CHART

In our room at Mission Beach school we have a rainfall chart.

It shows the lowest and the highest rainfall record. The lowest was 3.75 inches and the highest was 25.97 inches.

The annual average is 10 inches. This year so far it is 13.49 inches, but we do not expect any more this year.

CURRENT EVENTS

A few weeks ago our room started a current events collection. The part of the blackboard that is for current events is nearly full. A boy who has a paper route lets us have a paper nearly every day.

Report cards were given out on Tuesday. These reports are the last to come before the end of the year.

There are four children going to Point Loma junior high school from Mission Beach.

Jack Horner is out of school for two weeks. He has the mumps.

In the Mission Beach school we have bank day every Friday. Each room tries hard to have the largest bank account. Miss Wellar's room won last Friday.

We have been making fairy pictures. One boy in our room made such a lovely picture that Miss Morgain said that he could use gold tint on it. It is a very lovely picture now.

Last Friday we had a fine Memorial Day program. One boy from Miss Weller's room brought his father's helmet, which was used in the World War, and told us about it.

This last week many children have banked in the school. Altogether the sum of $8.33 was banked. The school is very proud of its savings.

The pupils of the fifth grade are weaving on heddle looms, and are doing nice work. They also have made some beautiful designs for tapestry in their art class.

The children of the 6-A have made some very pretty designs for stained glass windows. They are now working on designs for rose windows.

Electric lights have been placed in the kindergarten room, that it may be used as a community center.

Harvey Rubin has been quite active in taking care of the lawn and flowers.

Decoration Day was observed by an appropriate program, Friday morning at the court assembly.

There are only four more weeks of school, and all of the children are working real hard so they can be promoted. The pupils of the 6-A class are especially anxious to pass so they can enter Point Loma high school next September.

Heard And Seen On Stage And Screen

Balboa Theater

Dorothy Mackaill seems to have passed all contestants as the most popular leading lady for Richard Barthelmess. She is seen opposite the handsome actor in "Ranson's Folly," at the Balboa Theater beginning tomorrow. This is the fourth picture thus far in which she has supported Barthelmess.

As a change from former roles Miss Mackaill is seen as a simple daughter of the pioneer West in "Ranson's Folly." The picture is an adaption of the famous Richard Harding Davis story. It concerns the experiences of an attache to a sleepy frontier army post during the early 80's.

Miss Mackaill has been exceedingly successful in her roles opposite Barthelmess. Her first picture with him was "The Fighting Blade," and she played opposite him again in his following picture, "Twenty One." Her next big part opposite him was in "Shore Leave."

A tribe of full-blooded Wyoming Indians is seen in "Ranson's Folly." Among them are Chief Big Tree and Chief Eagle Wing, two of the most powerful Indian leaders now living.

A unique episode in "Ranson's Folly" is the picturization of a military court-martial, the first ever to reach the screen with all details intact. Col. George L. Bryam, a military authority, was in charge.

In the ever-enchanting world of modern theatricals, it is doubtful if any perfected invention of the past decade has found such a prominent place as the radio. Keeping right up to the mark with the latest and best entertainments available, Manager-Director H. L. Hartman announces for the Balboa Theatre program this week, that Fanchon and Marco will present their "Third Annual Radio Idea."

In building the production of "Radio Ideas", the originators Fanchon and Marco have been able to place on any stage, and more particularly the Balboa Theatre stage this week a complete broadcasting station, utilizing the identical equipment as is found in the larger studios on the Pacific Coast.

For the Balboa showing a number of famous entertainers have been gathered by Fanchon and Marco to properly convey to all audiences the exact manner in which radio broadcasting is done from central stations.

George Stolberg and the Balboa Music Master will present another colorful symphonic concert program. Stolberg through sheer artistry, charming personality and musical leadership, has established and maintained a local prestige with Balboa Theatre patrons.

Cabrillo Theater

Although a score of excellent pictorial efforts have come to the screen describing the perils of crossing the vast Western plains, not a single story has ever been filmed showing that a large majority of the seekers after gold in the California fields came to Sacramento by boat by via the Horn.

Taking advantage of this fact Frank Lloyd has picturized Vingie E. Roe's story of early California, "The Splendid Road" introducing the sea voyage from the east to the new country, and has also introduced for the first time the romance and adventure of a woman pioneer.

In filming this colorful tale of '49 Mr. Lolyd has employed the technique which has made him famous as a producer-director. Instead of going into the technicalities of the California gold rush, he makes romance and adventure predominate.

"The Splendid Road" has to do with the struggles and success of Sandra DeHault who set out from Boston on the "Colonial Dame" to find fortune and happiness in the new country, alone. Anna Q. Nilsson, whose popularity as Courtea in Mr. Lloyd's'Wind of Chance 'was marked, assumes the character of Sandra in "The Splendid Road" and featured with her are Robert Frazer and Lionel Barrymore's first First National picture in over five years.

Included in the supporting cast are Edward Earle, Edwards Davis, Pauline Garon, Gladys Brockwell, Marceline Day, George Bancroft and Snitz Edwards.

A Lidge Conley comedy "The Ghost" and West Coast Current Kinograms with Raymond Godden at the organ complete the program.

A GOOD TIP

Now is the time to buy purebred livestock. A considerable volume of purebred stock originally intended for breeding purposes has been going to the block because prices for purebreds in many instances have declined practically to the level of those paid for slaughter animals. There is need for purebred livestock on farms and it does not seem right to slaughter animals that could be used to improve the quality of farm herds and flocks.

An exceptionally high producing cow is worth many times the price of a slaughter animal. Not only does such an individual produce more actual milk and butterfat, but the superior production characteristics of such individuals may be passed on through several succeeding generations.

The fact should not be overlooked that purebred livestock is a real necessity. Without such stock, milk and butterfat records and weights of fleeces will decline and uniformity of type and quality will be sacrificed [illegible]
